

Dec 05, 2009

Communication seemed to me something very important from early on, so that people not have that sense of mystery about what a leader is up to. — Drew Gilpin Faust, Harvard University President

Leadership Without a Secret Code

Being a leader anywhere can be a difficult job. In this interview, Drew Gilpin Faust discusses what her life has been like as the leader of one of the most prestigious universities in the world, Harvard. Read how Faust uses simple tools like communication and team-building to create a cohesive atmosphere. Learn how hectic and rewarding a position of leadership can be.

Be The Change:

Consider how you are a leader. Whether at work, at home, or in your community, think about how you lead people, and find ways and strategies to do it more effectively.