Jane Goodall: On the Future of Plants & Chimps

"Over the course of 45 years studying the chimpanzees of Gombe Stream National Park in Tanzania, Jane Goodall revolutionized our understanding of our closest primate relatives. A champion of animal conservation and the author of 26 books, she turns her attention for the first time to plants with her upcoming book Seeds of Hope: Wisdom and Wonder from the World of Plants." In this interview the renowned chimp expert discusses her new book, her efforts to protect the rainforest and why she misses living with chimps.

Be The Change:

Goodall shares more about the power and beauty of the plant world in this thoughtful piece.
