

daily GOOD

The most important things are the hardest to say, because words diminish them. --Stephen King

On the Language of the Deep Blue

Drop your "cognitive gatekeeper" and travel along with best selling author Charles Foster as he paints a lyrical picture of whale communication. Follow the riff around a drone, like Byzantine chanters into the magical, mystical world of whales. Intuit the wonder of the world beyond the language of our minds.

Be The Change:

Find time in your day to slow down, be in nature, and listen to the rich communications that are being shared with you. Expand your view of language by reading below about people who don't use words for communication.