

daily GOOD

When you follow your bliss, doors will open where you would not have thought there would be doors; and where there wouldn't be a door for anyone else. --Joseph Campbell

A severe housing shortage on their reservation and the chance to win a national competition prompted a group of Native American, middle-school girls in Montana to develop a way to build a study hall out of straw. They won.

Be The Change:

If you see someone with a flat tire on the road, stop to help them. Be an unknown door for others.
