The world is too small, our wisdom too limited, our time here too short, to waste any more of it in winning fleeting victories at other people’s expense. We have to now find a way to triumph together. --Bill Clinton

Bill Clinton & My Commitment
Bill Clinton recently introduced MyCommitment.org, a new initiative which aims to provide all people with the resources to take action and make a real change in their communities and around the world. The website is inspired by the idea that as global citizens, we all have the unprecedented ability to help others achieve their dreams and realize a better future. Anyone -- regardless of age, income, education or where they live -- can do something that has a lasting impact and makes a difference in the lives of others, both down the street and around the world. Commitments can be of time, money, skills or goods. Clinton introduces the concept and site in this short video.

Be The Change:
What commitment have you been thinking of making for the greater good? Consider adding it to MyCommitment.org.