What wisdom can you find that is greater than kindness? --Jean Jacques Rousseau

Janitor's Endowment
When Genesio Morlacci left $2.3 million to a small college, many people were astonished at the wealth amassed by a man who operated a dry-cleaning shop and later worked as a part-time janitor in retirement. Morlacci died last month at age 102 and left the University of Great Falls with an endowment that will generate roughly $100,000 a year in student scholarships.

Be The Change:
Do a kind act for the first janitor you encounter today. Share this story with him/her.